Concept

Leadership is a task that you grow into step by step. On the one hand, it is about your own leadership personality. It's about leadership style, motivation and assertiveness. Knowledge of human nature, personal appearance and impact. With increasing responsibility and the rise in the company hierarchy, the proportion of management tasks increases. Leading managers; filling key positions; designing target and incentive systems; ensuring the implementation of decisions made; working atmosphere and employer attractiveness, managing necessary change, deepening results orientation, expanding entrepreneurship in the company, talent management and much more.

These increasingly conceptual leadership issues require new, expanded skills. Executive leadership is needed. This includes all those topics that can no longer be mastered with personal motivation and the right leadership behavior alone. Executive leadership is the art of steering an entire organization or a sub-division in a direction desired by the company. This requires new knowledge, new tools and new skills.
